Old Playground Of Movieland Great Now Just Dateline

PALM SPRINGS, CALIF.—This world-famous playground of the movie stars is becoming—like Hollywood—just a dateline.

Palm Springs is going commercial and celebrities are fleeing out into the desert, far beyond tourists' eyes.

The three newest luxury resorts ($25 to $35 a day) are all more than five miles from town.

There was a time when movie people were as thick on the streets as the grats which are Palm Springs' plague. That was when businessmen here regarded tourists as a low form of animal life.

In those days, during the war and for a while thereafter, hotels refused overnight guests. There were only a handful of places where the casual tourist could get a meal. Hotel and club restaurants were for guests or members only.

It's different now, especially since the recent economy wave in Hollywood. The tourist is welcomed. Collectively, he's got more dollars than the movie crowd.

But if he thinks he's going to get a glimpse of a movie star along with it, he's likely to be disappointed. Those who have their own places here, such as Bob Hope, Eddie Cantor or Frank Sinatra generally stick close to home base.

Animals Seem to Have Time-Telling Faculty

LOS ANGELES—A University of California professor is trying to solve a biological puzzle, the "biological clock," that mysterious process by which many animals seemingly are able to tell time.

Dr. Theodore Jahn, zoology professor at the university at Los Angeles, has set up a laboratory to find out more about this nonmechanical timepiece which has puzzled scientists for many years.

For example, the eyes of a crayfish glow at night. When it is placed in a dark room for a period, the eyes will not glow during the day but will light up about the same time every night. The unique timepiece of the crayfish sometimes runs for three months under such conditions and functions without "rewinding."

The doctor has studied this phenomenon in many insects through means of electroretinograms, which are records of electrical changes.

Shopper Sleuths Protect Buyers In Metropolis

NEW YORK—The butcher's scale read 3½ pounds but the chicken looked scrawny to its prospective purchaser. She snatched the bird from the store keeper before he could clean it, deftly removed an 8-ounce slug from its gizzard, and identified herself as an inspector of the city bureau of weights and measures here.

She then served the startled butcher a summons to appear at a bureau of hearing on a charge of "short-weighing." He was fined $100 and warned that a second offense would mean criminal court prosecution.

This recent incident in a Manhattan store is typical of the hundreds of retail cheating cases tracked down annually by the agency's shopping sleuths, whose slogan is "caveat emptor" (let the buyer beware). Although the bureau saves New York housewives millions of dollars a year, numerous instances of cheating unfortunately escape its vigilance.

Many Are Cheated

Fred J. Loughran, bureau director, said today that city storekeepers sold two billion dollars worth of food a year. Of this amount, he estimated that forty million dollars was mulcted from housewives as a result of underhanded practices behind counters.

Loughran cited a variety of methods distasteful to the user to swindle gullible customers. A recent case involved a grocery-store owner who placed all purchases on large pieces of wrapping paper. As he weighed each purchase, he surreptitiously held down one end of the paper to make the scale indicator go up a few ounces, and thus added a few extra dollars to his cash register every day.

In another instance an inspector caught a butcher who weighed meat on a piece of paper under which he placed a pound of flattened-out lead. The same agent also trapped a fishmonger who neglected to remove large chips of ice from his fish before he weighed them. Another inspector recently served a summons on a fruit vendor who casually left a few cherries and grapes on his scale as he weighed each purchase.

Develop Subtle Methods

Some ingeniously dishonest tradesmen have developed subtler methods for which they often dupe hundreds of innocent customers until a bureau employee spots the gimmick. One butcher who fell into this category wound a thin piece of string around the tray of his scale, the loose end of which fell to the floor behind the counter. To this end he attached a makeshift woodon pedal. As he placed a purchase on his scale he stepped on the pedal, regulating his touch carefully to add as much weight to a chicken as he desired.

To catch crooked retailers in the act of short-weighing, the bureau's 50 inspectors—four of whom are women—pose as customers and make test purchases.

Housework May Set Off Sudden Asthma Trouble

ATLANTIC CITY.—The endless routine of housework can sometimes be the trigger setting off sudden asthma affliction in the harrassed housewife, the American medical association was told.

As Dr. Francis M. Rackemann of Boston explained it, she gust become worn out and begins wheezing.

Often difficult relatives can be a precipitating factor, too, he said.

Health Unaffected By Soil Fertility

Status Of Land Not Disease Cause

Any statement that cancer, arthritis or heart disease are increasing because the foods we eat are raised on mineral-starved land is bokum according to specialists on the subject

An article in Successful Farming magazine contends there is more rather than knowledge about the effects of soil fertility on human health. The experts talked to doctors of the soil, doctors of plants, doctors of human nutrition ex cept the evangelists who say we are facing "race suicide."

It was pointed out that heart disease is often linked to diet, but not because food is of poor quality. Rather strictures and heart disease show a correlation.

As to arthritis and cancer, millions will call you blessed if you can show definitely how to stop them through diet. Meanwhile, it is dishonest to give the false hope that soil treatment can cure these dis eases.

Other myths blasted in the article are (1) that the baby won't have good bones if its formula is made of milk from a cow whose feed was deficient in phosphorus and calcium; (2) that the adult won't build muscle and blood from beefsteak devoid of protein-building minerals and iron; (3) that all chemical fertilizers are poison and that compost and earthworms are the only means of soil enrichment we should use, and (4) that we are being starved to death because the grains, fruits and vegetables we eat come from soils which lack needed minerals.

Discussing starvation from a mineral deficiency in foods, it is asked why we have a generation-by-generation increase in the size of the bony structure of our young people if we are mineral-starved.

So far as scientists know, man needs some 12 mineral elements for growth. Ruminant animals need cobalt, to make B12. Plants also need 13 mineral elements, 11 of them the same as needed for man and animals. Except for cobalt and iodine, plants won't grow unless all the mineral elements are present, according to the article.

As to statements that some milk is low in phosphorus and calcium, it is said a cow will take calcium from her own bones and put it in her milk if her diet is low in calcium. As that supply runs low, she will give less and less milk. But it will contain honest weight in minerals. When her mineral supply is gone, she quits giving milk and often dies from the effects of robbing her body.

A fertilized farm will produce more milk than one unfertilized — but not better milk. That's because it produces more grass. There is no evidence that the grass is any better, blade for blade.

Contour Crop Plantings Saves Soil, Boosts Yield

Topsoil can be saved and crop yields boosted by planting crops on the contour instead of up and down the slope. Each furrow makes a tiny dam that prevents the swift runoff of water. By holding back the water, these dams allow time for the soil to soak up moisture. When contouring is teamed with cover crops and adequate fertilization, top soil conservation benefits result.

FATHER DARKLEAF

By The Editor

The sports columnist of the New York Herald Tribune is alleged to claim that the toughest part of writing a column is the "plinth." We disagree. A "plinth" is a base for a column. Look it up. And a base for a column never worries us. The trouble we have is to whittle down the stack of suggestions from our "plinth box" and "3rd time to bat a few words into type.

Here are a few "plinths:"

A family from Europe has just arrived at the farm of Lyle Garrette near Concord, coming over under the Government's "Displaced" Person" program. Lyle Garrette is the son of Mrs. M. L. Garrette, of Appomattox. We commend him for his contribution to good neighborliness. The family was part of a group arriving this week from the Ukraine. We speak no English - anyway Father Yurkiwf should be up there to look-

Another "plinth:"

The baseball records show Americus, Ga. is fourth at the moment in the Florida - Georgia league, and has an average slightly above the .500 mark. And that the leading pitcher for Americus is "Cyrus," with a 15 won and 6 lost record. Couldn't that be our friend, Dave Cyrus from Spout Spring?

"Plinth" on walking:

How far have you ever walked at one time? Surely, walking is the best exercise, but just what is your longest record? I'm slipping. As a boy Scoutmaster years ago, Father Dalkiief did quite a bit of walking. To get in our 14-mile hikes, we built a log cabin 7 miles from town. Then we would hike out to the cabin, take scout tests and cook supper in the open, and either hike back that same night or spend the night. And 14 miles with a pack is just right. At first our record. Back in the days of hitch-hiking, your editor made his one and only venture in that line. I may be one of the very few modern hitch-hikers! Anyway, back in 1922 our school was to play the University of Virginia in football one Saturday, and four of us left Richmond Friday morning, to be game. Rides were few and far between in those days. Most of the time we just walked. We made as far as Mineral that night, and set out of doors. A kindly farmer served us breakfast the next morning. I'll never forget that breakfast! We nearly starved and never had eaten anything so wonderful as that meal of cornbread and sweet potatoes. Well, we walked on and on, with Charlottesville still an incredible distance off. Finally we rode down a bumpy truck, and got it to Lambeth Field just in time for the kick-off. Some friends helped us all the way back to Richmond in their car; otherwise, I'm convinced I should not have made it. How far did we walk? It seemed like a million miles, and it was once and for all of hitch-hiking. Whenever I think of walking, I think of William G. Moose, for several years in Appomattox in the early 1930's. He used to think nothing of walking all the way to Lynchburg, and I remember one Sunday he walked to Farmville. That's big league stuff. Maybe we have some "plinths" on walk-

Va. Advertises Leaf Auctions

Visitors to Virginia this autumn are invited to watch tobacco auctions in action and listen at close range to the famed chant of the tobacco auctioneer, by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce and some of its member organizations.

The State Chamber is organizing tours of tobacco warehouses during the harvest through the cooperation of local chambers of commerce in marketing towns. The plan is being offered in Virginia's ten Old Belt marts, four dark tobacco markets, and one sun-cured market and one burley market. Local chamber of commerce committees will provide well-informed guides to escort visitors on their tours.

The "Tobaccoland Tours" are a part of the State Chamber's overall plan to provide more inducements for tourists to visit the Old Dominion and to lengthen their stay in the State. Special information on tobacco growing, marketing and manufacturing is being prepared to give to visitors.

Virginia's Old Belt market, so called because tobacco culture in the region dates back to Colonial days, opens on September 12 and operates until mid-December. Market towns in this Southern Virginia area are Danville, Martinsville, Rocky Mount, South Boston, Brookneal, Clarksville, Chase City, Kenbridge, South Hill, Lawrenceville and Petersburg. Tobacco sold on these markets is the "bright" or flue cured type.

The Virginia Fire-Cured markets are located in Bedford, Blackstone, Farmville and Lynchburg. The central Virginia marts open in mid-December, and specialize in a type used chiefly in snuff and export trade. This tobacco is commonly referred to as 'dark-fired."

Abingdon, in the southwestern section of the State, is Virginia's only burley market. This type of tobacco is grown principally in Kentucky and is used in cigarettes and pipe mixtures. The market opens in January.

Richmond is reputed to be the only sun-cured tobacco market in the world. This highly specialized "sweet" type is used in chewing tobacco and is grown in several counties near the Virginia capital. Richmond also manufactures more cigarettes than any other city in the world.

The sun-cured warehouses are located in Richmond's Shockoe Creek near the site of William Byrd's trading post which the city's birthplace in Colonial days. The sun-cured market opens in January.

Danville is rated as the world's second largest tobacco market. It has twelve warehouses and four "sets" of buyers, representing manufacturers, exporters and independent leaf companies.

For many years, tobacco was Virginia's largest single source of agricultural income. Now, however, diversified farming and crop rotations, dairy products production ranks first.

Concord Road Contract Given By The State

The State Highway Commission today announced award of $112,691 contract to relocate nearly two miles of U. S. Route 460 east of the N & W underpass at Concord.

The new section will extend for 1.865 miles from a point just east of the underpass. It will eliminate the many curves and bad grades on the present road and straighten the underpass approach. Speed limit on this old section is marked with a maximum safe speed of 35 MPH.

The new road will be on the northeast side of the present road, and will have a 24 foot heavy duty macadam surface. These specifications conform to the heavy duty standards for all of U. S. 460 between Lynchburg and Petersburg as set up by the Department's 20-year plan for improving Virginia's highways.

Work on the project will begin after approval of the contractor's bid by The U. S. Bureau of Public Roads. Barring unforeseen construction difficulties and extensive inclement weather, the job will be finished approximately nine months from its commencement.

The contract went to Perkins-Barnes Construction Co., Blackstone and Adams and Tate Construction Co., Roanoke, on the basis of their low net bid submitted August 16.
